Teacher Training Mission Statement:

CFF aspires to offering authentic superior quality teacher trainings for Functional Core work to the public (you the student & trainee) both national and international; making “core” work and anything you do with the body “functional” and useable for everyone.

Philosophy

It's not about mastering the movements anymore but adapting those movements to the student and allowing the practice(s) to benefit their life in a functional way. Showing teachers how to apply these concepts to their own lives and as a result teach them to thirsting students alike; giving students an empowerment of knowledge, understanding, focus, skill and life experience with movement and their bodies, no matter what you teach.

History

Core Functional Fitness by Hope Zvara(TM) is a functional method of movement that addresses postures, movements and body alignment from the ground up, both on and off the mat. The focus is not on "do this movement" or "perform this way", but on how the body communicates with itself for a functional, applicable movement specified to one's needs. Basically, function in your life!

CFF takes into consideration that "commonsense" recommendations do not equal less pain and many are not backed with any supportive research that would yield a positive outcome (McGill). Taking for example someone telling you to "take a Pilates or yoga class", this does not insure that you will feel better; you might actually feel worse if the teacher is not competent. CFF is currently challenging today's wave of thought on fitness, yoga, Pilates and their trainings. So I ask you, is what you are doing, does it have any merit as to how it will actually positively influence the body, both short and long term?

Hope has been influenced by functional experts like Gary Gray, Leslee Bender, and Stewart McGill, all of whom believe in functional application in exercise based programs, believe that the core is the support beam and what I like to call, the motherboard of all movements and being a yoga teacher for nearly half of my life, blending the two skills together was natural and just made sense.

Program Description

Are you ready to discover what your “core” really means? If we can understand where our core is, what our core entails and how to effectively use it in combination with gravity and a functional approach; our chances of decreasing injuries, increasing whole-body function and see what it truly means that everything is an extension of our core. Here we will reevaluate neutral, the spine, three areas stability can be lost, layers of the core, fascia release, strength and strengthen combination. Along with basic core functional movements that reinforce this method of practice. Core Functional Fitness by Hope Zvara™ thrives on the notion that you need to think and feel in combination in order to truly be functional and effective in the body-so let's start there!

The Core Functional Fitness® poses, processes, and techniques are a valuable addition and approach to your teaching and personal practice. As a Core Functional Fitness teacher, you will learn to go beyond the formulaic instruction and truly understand and develop the skills and know-how of how to teach and create functional, core based movements to not only help you step out of your teaching box, but your students and clients as well. Core Functional Fitness® helps it's practitioners' and teachers create, define and lead students as well as themselves towards a true path of self healing, understanding why we do what we do and how to stimulate true healing, health and harmony in the body to lead us all to the path of pain-free, strong and core empowered.

Core Functional Fitness Level 2 Applying the Principles Training will empower and prepare you to teach your regular classes, workshops and clients incorporating CFF's principles, poses, and techniques into your already existing regimen, in addition you the practitioner will be able to refine your teaching and gain a more in-depth understanding of functionality in the human body.

In Level 2 training, students will be able to take the previous knowledge a step further and refine the application of each movement and pose. More detailed classroom theory and application will be applied as well as a greater in-depth look on the anatomy of each movement and why it works. At this point students will be able to utilize the brand and trademark of Core Functional Fitness® in their classes and studios.
